

Special Educational Needs (SEN) Support

SEN Support in mainstream schools

This information is about the support that mainstream schools should provide for children with special educational needs (SEN).

The SEND Code of Practice 2015 (6.1) says:

all children and young people are entitled to an appropriate education, one that is appropriate to their needs, promotes high standards and the fulfilment of potential. This should enable them to:

- achieve their best;
- become confident individuals living fulfilling lives; and
- make a successful transition into adulthood, whether into employment, further or higher education or training

What is SEN Support?

Every child with identified special educational needs should have SEN Support. This means help that is additional to or different from the support generally given to other children of the same age.

The purpose of 'SEN Support' is to help children achieve the outcomes or learning objectives set for them by the school. Schools should involve parents in this process.

Every school must publish a SEN information report about the SEN provision the school makes. You can find this on the school's website. You can also ask your child's teacher or the school's Special Educational Needs Co-ordinator for information on the SEN provision made by the school.

The Local Offer published by Camden Council also sets out what support it expects early years settings, schools and colleges to make for all children and young people with SEN or disabilities.

SEN Support can take many forms, including:

- a special learning programme for your child
- extra help from a teacher or a learning support assistant
- making or changing materials and equipment
- working with your child in a small group
- observing your child in class or at break and keeping records
- helping your child to take part in the class activities
- making sure your child has understood things by encouraging them to ask questions and to try something they find difficult
- helping other children work with your child, or play with them at break time

- supporting your child with physical or personal care, such as eating, getting around school safely, toileting or dressing.

Who decides what SEN Support my child needs?

The SEND Code of Practice 2015 (6.17) says:

..class and subject teachers, supported by the senior leadership team, should make regular assessments of progress for all pupils. These should seek to identify pupils making less than expected progress given their age and individual circumstances.

The school should then decide if your child needs 'SEN Support'. The school should talk to you and your child about this. If a young person is 16 or older the school should involve them directly.

Sometimes you may be the first to be aware that your child has some special educational needs. If you think your child may need 'SEN Support' you should talk to your child's teacher or to the Special Educational Needs Co-ordinator.

If you are not happy about the support your child has you can ask to talk to the Special Educational Needs Co-ordinator or head teacher. You can also find out more by looking at 'Where can I get more information, advice or support?' at the end of the leaflet.

The duties on schools to make SEN provision

The SEND Code of Practice 2015 (6.2) says all schools must: use their best endeavours to make sure that a child with SEN gets the support they need – this means doing everything they can to meet children and young people's SEN.

and

The SEND Code of Practice 2015 (6.44) says: where a pupil is identified as having SEN, schools should take action to remove barriers to learning and put effective special educational provision in place.

A graduated approach

The process the school should use to meet these duties is known as the Graduated Approach. This is based on four steps which are:

ASSESS

Teaching staff should work with the Special Educational Needs Co-ordinator to assess your child's needs, so that they give the right support. They should involve you in this and, where possible, seek your child's views.

The SEND Code of Practice 2015 (6.45) says:
schools should take seriously any concerns raised by a parent.

Sometimes schools will seek advice from a specialist teacher or a health professional. They should talk to you about this first.

PLAN

If the school decides that your child needs 'SEN Support' it must tell you. The school should talk with you about the outcomes that will be set, what help will be provided and agree a date for progress to be reviewed.

DO

Your child's class or subject teacher is usually responsible for the work that is done with your child and should work closely with any teaching assistants or specialist staff involved. The school should tell you who is responsible for the support your child receives.

All those who work with your child should be made aware of their needs, the outcomes sought, the support provided and any teaching strategies or approaches that are required.

REVIEW

The school should review your child's progress, and the difference that the help your child has been given has made, on the date agreed in the plan. You and your child should be involved in the review and in planning the next step.

The SEND Code of Practice 2015 (6.65) says:
schools should meet parents at least three times each year..

Sometimes it helps to involve other professionals in further assessment or to support planning the next steps. If your child has not made reasonable progress it will be important to agree with the school what should happen next.

You and the school can look at the Local Offer to see what support is available that could help achieve your child's outcomes.

Where can I get more information, advice or support?

You can find out more about 'SEN Support' by:

- looking on the Local Offer for the WSCC Graduated Approach document
- looking at the SEN Information Report on the school website
- talking to your child's teacher or the Special Educational Needs Co-ordinator
- reading the SEND Code of Practice 2015.

You can also get in touch with Camden SEND Information, Advice and Support Service (SENDIASS Camden) who can give you:

- information about 'SEN Support', including information about SEN funding
- advice about what to do if you are not happy with the support your school is providing
- information about other organisations, support groups and information services that could help
- information and advice about your rights to request an EHC needs assessment.

The role of the SENDIAS service is to ensure that all parents, children and young people have access to impartial information, advice and support so they can make informed decisions related to their SEND. Any information that is shared with the service is in confidence unless permission has been obtained to share this with other individuals, services and agencies that may be able to help the family with their circumstances
